Reading Comprehension Passage

In the second quarter of 2026, the global energy landscape has witnessed a seismic shift. The "Green Hydrogen Corridor" initiative, spearheaded by a coalition of European and Asian economies, has moved from a conceptual framework to a functional reality. Unlike the volatile fossil fuel markets of the previous decade, this new infrastructure relies on decentralized electrolyzer hubs powered by offshore wind and desert solar arrays. However, the transition is not without its detractors. Critics argue that the massive capital expenditure required for hydrogen-ready pipelines could divert funds from immediate battery-storage solutions. Furthermore, the "resource nationalism" seen in lithium mining is now beginning to manifest in the control of platinum-group metals, essential for fuel-cell membranes. As nations navigate this transition, the definition of energy security is being rewritten—not by the possession of reserves, but by the mastery of conversion technology.

1. Primary Purpose

What is the primary purpose of the passage?

- A) To advocate for battery storage
- B) To analyze a shifting energy paradigm
- C) To criticize European initiatives
- D) To explain how wind turbines work

2. Vocabulary in Context

What does the word "seismic" most nearly mean as used in the first sentence?

- A) Relating to earthquakes
- B) Subtle and gradual
- C) Enormous and impactful
- D) Temporarily disruptive

3. Fact Check

According to the passage, what powers the decentralized electrolyzer hubs?

- A) Natural gas and coal
- B) Lithium-ion batteries
- C) Nuclear fusion reactors
- D) Wind and solar energy

4. Inference

It can be inferred from the passage that "resource nationalism" is:

- A) A new phenomenon in 2026
- B) The act of nations protecting their resources
- C) A strategy to lower energy prices
- D) Limited only to the oil and gas industry

5. Identifying the Argument

What is one major concern raised by critics of the Green Hydrogen Corridor?

- A) Lack of sunlight in deserts
- B) The high cost of specialized pipelines

C) The efficiency of offshore wind

D) A lack of interest from Asian economies

6. Vocabulary (Opposites)

What is the antonym of "detractors" as used in the passage?

- A) Opponents B) Supporters
- C) Analysts D) Electrolyzers

7. Mastery vs. Reserves

The author concludes that energy security in 2026 depends primarily on:

- A) Owning vast fossil fuel reserves
- B) Mastery of conversion technology
- C) Reducing the use of solar power
- D) Discovering new lithium mines

8. Tone Analysis

How would you describe the tone of the passage?

- A) Skeptical and cynical
- B) Informative and balanced
- C) Aggressive and biased
- D) Overly optimistic

9. Critical Thinking

The passage suggests that platinum-group metals are important because:

- A) They are used in wind turbines
- B) They are a cheaper alternative to lithium
- C) They are vital for fuel-cell membranes
- D) They are found in desert solar arrays

10. Logical Extension

If the passage continued, which topic would most likely be discussed next?

- A) The history of the steam engine
- B) A list of famous lithium miners

- C) Technological breakthroughs in fuel cells
D) Vacation spots in offshore wind farms

Word of the Day: “Scalable”: Scalable refers to the ability of a system, process, or organization to handle increasing amounts of work or demand efficiently without compromising performance.

In today’s digital ecosystem, platforms developed by companies like Amazon and Uber are highly scalable—they can seamlessly support millions of users simultaneously by expanding their infrastructure as demand grows. This ensures smooth user experiences even during peak times like sales events or high-demand travel hours..
