Reading Comprehension Passage

"Blue Economy" The Passage

By April 2026, the concept of the "Blue Economy" has transitioned from a niche environmental policy to a pillar of global GDP. Nations are increasingly looking toward the seabed not just for traditional fisheries, but for the "polymetallic nodules" essential for the next generation of solid-state batteries. This shift has necessitated a radical update to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS). As deep-sea mining technology advances, so too do the geopolitical frictions over "underwater sovereignty." Small island nations, once considered peripheral in global trade, are now the literal gatekeepers of massive oceanic economic zones. However, marine biologists warn that the sediment plumes generated by these mining crawlers could cause irreversible damage to the bathypelagic zones, effectively suffocating deep-ocean biodiversity before it is even fully mapped. The challenge for 2026 is clear: balancing the urgent mineral requirements of the green energy transition with the preservation of the Earth's final frontier.

1. Main Idea

What is the primary theme discussed in the passage?

- A) The history of fisheries
- B) Oceanic economic shifts and their risks
- C) The decline of solar energy
- D) Building faster underwater crawlers

2. Contextual Meaning

As used in the passage, what does the term "peripheral" suggest about small island nations in the past?

- A) They were central to trade
- B) They were of secondary importance
- C) They were technologically lead
- D) They were geographically isolated

3. Factual Recall

According to the text, why are "polymetallic nodules" currently in high demand?

- A) For jewelry production
- B) For deep-sea mapping
- C) For solid-state batteries
- D) For offshore wind turbines

4. Inference

What can be inferred about the current state of UNCLOS (UN Convention on the Law of the Sea)?

- A) It is perfectly adequate
- B) It has been recently revised or needs it
- C) It has been completely abolished
- D) It only applies to surface fishing

5. Cause and Effect

According to marine biologists, what is the specific cause of potential damage to the bathypelagic zones?

- A) Overfishing
- B) Rising water temperatures
- C) Sediment plumes from mining
- D) Plastic pollution

Correct Answer: C

Explanation: The text explicitly attributes the danger to "sediment plumes generated by these mining crawlers."

6. Vocabulary (Synonym)

Which word is closest in meaning to "sovereignty" as used in the context of the ocean?

- A) Tourism
- B) Jurisdiction
- C) Conservation
- D) Exploration

7. Author's Tone

- A) Uncritically supportive
- B) Hostile and dismissive
- C) Cautious and balanced
- D) Indifferent

8. Structural Analysis

The phrase "the Earth's final frontier" at the end of the passage refers to:

- A) Outer space
- B) The deep ocean
- C) Solid-state tech
- D) Small island nations

9. Logical Prediction

Based on the passage, if conversion technology does not improve, what is a likely outcome?

- A) More nodules will be found
- B) Tensions over oceanic zones will decrease
- C) Environmental damage will rise
- D) Batteries will become cheaper

10. Summary Choice

Which of the following would be the most suitable title for this passage?

- A) The Death of the Fishing Industry
- B) Solid-State Batteries: A History
- C) The Blue Economy: Profit vs. Planet
- D) The Fall of Peripheral Nations

Word of the Day "Efficient": Efficient refers to the ability to achieve maximum productivity with minimum wasted effort, time, or resources.

In today's digital ecosystem, systems developed by companies like Netflix and Google are highly efficient—they optimize resource usage, processing speed, and data handling to deliver fast and seamless user experiences. This efficiency enables reduced operational costs, quicker response times, and the ability to scale services effectively while maintaining high performance.
